VM Report Weighs In on Top Labs

COVER TOPIC

TOP
LABS
VM 2015

BY ANDREW KARP / GROUP EDITOR, LENSES + TECHNOLOGY

NEW YORK—Fast. Flexible. Resourceful. Responsive. These qualities, along with good value, are what eyecare professionals look for in a wholesale optical laboratory.

However, the customers of the industry's largest wholesalers, VM's Top Labs, set the bar higher. They demand the latest lens designs, materials and coatings, and an extensive choice of name brand and private label products. When they have questions about technical issues or product availability they want answers instantly. They want rapid turnaround, and sometimes even same-day service.

As VM's newly released 2015 Top Labs Report shows, these Wholesale Heavyweights deliver all this, and more. This exclusive report, based on our annual survey, ranks independent wholesalers and supplier-owned lab networks according to their projected Rx sales and productivity.

To meet customers' expectations, the Top Labs continually adapt to shifting market conditions, including new forms of competition, a changing work force and new government programs that are reshaping the health care industry. The fact that 18 of the 25 independent and supplier-owned wholesalers ranked in VM's 2015 Top Labs Report grew their Rx lens sales and increased their Rx lens production over the past year despite the challenging business climate shows just how accomplished they are. ■

Top Labs' Vital Stats

- The total net sales for all 25 Top Labs, including both supplier-owned lab networks and independent labs, will climb to $2.8 billion in 2015, up 8.3 percent from 2014.
- The total Rx sales for the Top Labs will hit $2.5 billion, a 7.8 percent increase over 2014.
- Collectively, the Top Labs will produce a total of 152,585 Rx jobs per day, (approximately 38.1 million Rx jobs annually), a 6 percent increase over 2014
- Rx sales for the Top 5 Supplier-Owned Lab Networks will climb to $2 billion, a 7.7 percent increase from 2014.
- The Top 5 will collectively produce 121,300 Rx jobs per day, up 6.6 percent from last year.
- The Top 5 currently operate 190 lab locations, three less than last year.
- Total Rx sales for the Top 20 Independent Labs will grow to $489.9 million, up 8.2 percent from 2014.
- The Top 20 will collectively produce 31,285 Rx jobs per day, an increase of 5.3 percent from last year.
- Although the Top 20 Independents operate 81 locations, 4 less than last year, the number of workers they employ is up 5 percent from 2014.

Top Lab Execs Assess Challenges and Identify Opportunit

VM asked executives at several of the Top Labs to share their outlook on the current business climate for labs. They cited a variety of factors that are impacting wholesalers, including Congressional gridlock, health care regulations and difficulty hiring qualified employees.

VM: What are the biggest business challenges facing wholesale labs today?

“It is very difficult to find optical talent with strong motivated work ethics. Lab training programs are rare and most learning occurs on the job. The staff we have is excellent and hard to replace.

It’s especially difficult to find data entry, phone room, optical techs and tinting staff. Where the equipment is highly automated and complicated, the work force needs are even more severe.

—Ralph Cotran, co-owner, US Optical

“Hiring quality workers and retaining them. Let’s face it, the workforce of today isn’t the same as even a few years ago. Workers aren’t as reliable and expect more liberties at work. We are going to devote some time and energy on finding a solution to maintain our level of service with this generation of workers.”

—Mike Tamerius, owner, Precision Optical Group

“The largest challenge is planning capital equipment expenditures and the tax ramifications of such purchases. The largest obstacle is the federal government. Due to the indecision in Congress, section 179 depreciation rules have not been decided for 2015. In 2014, the rule was enacted during the second week of December. Without knowing the specifics of this tax law for 2015, it can mean the difference of taxable income that is $600,000 with the same rules as last year, or up to $1,600,000 with the current amounts. Therefore, it’s extremely difficult to plan for future expansion.

—Bill Heffner, owner, FEA Industries

Top Lab Execs See Challenges and Opportunities

“The wholesale lab industry is facing two major challenges in today’s market. The reality is that virtually all lens products, whether it is coatings, treatments or designs, utilize effectively the same technology. Independent labs like Identity Optical are able to offer the same technology as the big name labs, generally at less expensive price points and with better customer service, but have to work to educate the consumer on the value of the independent lab products, and show them that we produce some of the best lens products in the business.

Second, the co-managed care system used by many vision benefits companies prevents many labs from even competing for much of the lens production business. Because vision benefits companies are effectively forcing their insureds to purchase lenses from labs owned by those same vision benefits companies, competition is being removed from the industry, resulting in many labs going out of business.

—Peter Kimerling, national sales director, Identity Optical

“Health care and unstable business environments created by government agencies that regulate the health care market.”

—Barney Dougher, CEO, Hoya Vision Care

What are the most significant growth opportunities for labs?

“Multiple pairs due to stronger awareness of eyeglasses to the public as the market ages and develops

due to functional eye awareness opportunities. These include products such as blue light, polarized and near activity lenses.”

—Barney Dougher

“The best growth opportunity is, and has been for the past few years, free-form. This can greatly reduce the cost of goods and inventory cash requirements for a lab. Thus, it becomes much easier to produce a better product at a lower cost with quicker turn-around.”

—Bill Heffner

“The opportunity for an independent lab is to differentiate yourself from the ‘me too’ pack. That means providing ECPs with the fastest turnaround, endless choices and flexibility, and be extremely easy to work with. You’ve got to go the extra step...I pick up the phone daily and work with ECPs to resolve their challenges.”

—Ralph Cotran

“Providing excellent customer service and lower price points. If you can provide a small lab feel and personalization with competitive pricing you will grow your business. As the larger corporate labs are looking for offshore sources to produce the products at lower price points the independent lab needs to focus on cost cutting and customer service.”

—Mike Tamerius

“Offering unparalleled customer service presents the best opportunity for new business acquisition. We consider our accounts not as customers, but as partners, where we have a symbiotic relationship dependent upon mutual success.”

—Peter Kimerling

Over the past 12 months, what steps has your lab taken to remain competitive?

“We have continued to invest in more automation and process controls. The digital lens process gives the lab a great opportunity to streamline production and control the quality of the end product. We have focused on cutting costs from our production which in turn has allowed us to remain competitive in pricing.”

—Mike Tamerius

“We’ve invested $24 million to build the first fully automated complete free-form lab in the country.

—Barney Dougher

“We utilize the best digital lens production and finishing equipment, and have cultivated a close relationship with Carl Zeiss Vision in order to establish specialized products, such as our blue Titanium AR coating. But the best investment we have made is in our people. We take active steps to develop our employees, and provide them with a foundational understanding of optics and optical production.”

—Peter Kimerling

“We have added more space including an additional 6000 square feet in a building next door. We have looked for niche optical products. We purchased a third MEI edger and a sixth free-form generator. We added a robotic deblocker and a robotic taper, and have ordered an additional free-form marking machine. And our staff is up to 130 people, which really helps our turnaround time.”

—Ralph Cotran

“Partnering with other labs. As the cost of equipment gets prohibitive, it’s difficult for smaller labs to be able to expand their infrastructure. This is where it can be beneficial for them to partner with larger labs that have the capital resources to keep up to date. We are able to brand free-form lenses to their specifications, making it possible for them to have their own private label lens with no equipment costs.”

—Bill Heffner

Top Labs That Made News This Year

NEW YORK—Since VM published its 2014 Top Labs Report, several of the wholesale heavyweights have made expansions, improvements and acquisitions. Here's a brief recap of the Top Labs that made news during the past year.

September, 2014

Hoya Vision Care significantly expanded the production capacity at its main lab near Dallas, Texas with the creation of an Intercompany Manufacturing Center (IMC). The IMC is part of a three-year plan begun in 2013 to expand Hoya's spectacle lens production and manufacturing capabilities.

The IMC is designed for maximum efficiency and features next-generation lens processing technology, robotic automation, and state-of-the-art anti-reflective lens coating. It serves as a hub for Hoya's 29 other labs which are located around the country. The 100,000 square-foot facility runs 24/7, 365 days per year, and is staffed with approximately 100 workers who operate three shifts of continuous production.

November, 2014

Hoya Vision Care opened a branch in Linthicum, Maryland. Territory managers Tammy Maxey and Janelle Trowbridge were named as the primary local representatives for the new lab. In addition to local territory managers, operations at the new facility will be headed by laboratory manager Tim Shields.

Essilor acquired QC Optical, a wholesale optical laboratory with branches in Portland, Ore. and Spokane, Wash. Essilor closed these branches and merged QC Optical into Opti-Craft, an Essilor lab in Portland. The former owners of QC Optical, Jim McAndrew and Bruce Hengel, transitioned over to Opti-Craft.

VSP Optics Group re-engineered and expanded its VSPOne Optical Technology Center

near Sacramento, Calif., nearly doubling the original location's footprint, bringing it to 80,000 square feet. VSP invested $37 million in the Sacramento lab, including significant funding for state-of-the-art optical manufacturing equipment and automation currently not in use in any other lab in the U.S. The lab processes 4,500 pairs of eyewear each day, and has the capacity to process up to 8,000 pairs of eyewear a day.

May, 2015

VSP Optics Group opened a new VSPOne Optical Technology Center in Denver, Colo. VSP said the new laboratory was established to help meet growing demand for its Unity Performance Optics products in the Southwest region. The Denver facility expands the VSPOne Optical Technology Center network to a total of 14 locations, including Baltimore, Charlotte, Columbus, Dallas, Fort Lauderdale, Hawaii, Houston, New York, Olympia, Sacramento, San Diego, St. Cloud and Tampa Bay. Similar to the VSPOne locations in Baltimore, Charlotte, Houston, and New York, the new Denver location specializes in quick processing and turnaround of the entire Unity lens and coatings portfolio.

May, 2015

Walman Optical introduced a new brand identity. The Walman name remained intact as the master brand that unifies the company's six divisions: Walman Optical, Walman Instruments, X-Cel Specialty Contacts, ImageWear, ADO Practice Solutions and Ultra Optics as indicated by the common logomark. By designating a distinct color for each division, individual brands stand on their own in the marketplace with a clearer purpose, according to Walman. The rebranding is part of Walman's 100th anniversary celebration. ■
