

Technicolor Tints

JAMIE WILSON / ASSOCIATE EDITOR

WHO: Originally a popular sun style during the 1970s, this look has been trending on 2017's street style scene, the Instagram feeds and blogs of many of today's influencers.

WHAT: Color tinted lenses are back on the fashion scene. Along with the more iconic yellow/orange hued lenses, sun frames are taking this up a notch featuring rose, purple, green and blue colored lenses. Used in both acetate and metal frames, this is definitely the look of Summer 2017.

WEAR: (FROM TOP): Safilo's DiorSoRealPop sunglasses combine a refined metal frame featuring Havana acetate temples with purple-tinted lenses—creating an eye catching contrast. This lightweight, colorful frame is a versatile, fun look. Retrosuperfuture's Drew Mama frame from the Hot Series gives off major "green with envy" vibes. This green acetate frame is matched with bright green colored lenses that make it a statement piece for any wardrobe. Andy Wolf's Agatha in black is a classic, stylish frame that is elevated through the use of rose colored lenses. The Mgree Group's Trina Turk Ishia model in Bradbury Mosaic is a fun yet highly wearable take on this trend. The thick acetate frame showcases darker blue tints that blend well with the mosaic of blue, pink and purple hues which really transform in the light. Marcolin's Tom Ford Connor-02 style is the most iconic take on this trend paying homage to the original style of the 1970s with a refined take. This exaggerated aviator shape features a white horn acetate brow bar with light orange tinted lenses.

WHY: Color tinted lenses are the ideal look for those who want to explore a different take with their sunwear that doesn't revolve around acetate or metal. Looking to the lens as a statement maker showcases an interesting yet nostalgic take on sunglasses. We all know that trends come and go, and it's obvious that these modern color tinted lenses are heating things up this summer.

jwilson@jobson.com

Get a Special Look at the Show with The Vision Expo Show Dailies

- The ONLY official show publication at International Vision Expo
- Must-read coverage on show experience, business, fashion and innovation
- Distributed at the entrance of the exhibit halls all three days of the show

For advertising opportunities contact your Sales Manager or Dennis Murphy at DMurphy@jobson.com